THE NUISANCES REMOVAL AND DISEASES PREVENTION ACT.—On the 4th ult. an Act of Parliament was passed (11 and 12 Vict., cap. 123), which must be adopted jointly with the Public Health Act, to effect certain sanitary regulations. The Act is to renew and amend the 9th and 10th Vict., cap. 96, for the more speedy removal of certain nuisances, and the prevention of contagious and epidemic diseases. On information in writing from two householders of the filthy condition of any building, or of the existence of any nuisance, an examination is to be made, and on a medical certificate, the owner to be summoned before a magistrate, who shall, upon proof, order the nuisance to be removed, and enforce the order if it is not obeyed: the expenses are to be recovered from the owner. Notice is to be given to the General Board of Health of the intention to open certain hospitals, and by the 9th section the Privy Council is empowered to issue orders for putting in force the Act for the prevention of epidemic diseases—"That when any part of the United Kingdom shall appear to be threatened with, or affected by, any formidable epidemic, endemic, or contagious diseases, measures of precaution should be taken with promptitude." After an order so made, the General Board of Health may give directions which the Poor-law Board may compel guardians to enforce. There are several penal enactments in the Act, with one to enter premises and put in operation the regulations of the General Board of Health. The imminence of the peril to be anticipated from the already rumoured advent of cholera to more than one part of the country, has induced the issue of an Order in Council, dated 28th ult., which now enforces this Act throughout the whole of Great Britain. The Poor-law Board, too, have issued a notification respecting its enforcement within the jurisdiction of the Poor-law Unions.
